"THE APPAREL OFT PROCLAIMS THE MAN."

For that matter, Shakespeare, when he indited those lines, could not have intended to overlook the coming man-the boy of today-he must have intended to cover him as well. Speaking about coverings, we are prepared to cover man or boy with our ready-to-wear clothing, which is ready to fit, and fit perfectly too, at a fityour-pocketbook price, right here. You don't have to go any further. Come whenever you like, buy when you are satisfied to buy. Do not henitate to come to our store, if you think you don't want to buy. Salesmen are not here to per suade people to buy our clothing, they merely show it, as it is, it does its own persuading. No better goods for the money on earth.
